NOTICE RESPECTING MISS EDGEWORTH'S WORKS.

As many persons have been induced to purchase books to which the name of Edgeworth was prefixed, under the idea that they were written by Maria Edgeworth of Edgeworth-town; a name justly celebrated from her unceasing endeavours to instruct and improve the mind; we willingly insert the following notice in order that the public may be put on their guard against purchasing worthless publications.

"It is painful to address the public in a manner that has at first sight the appearance of a mean artifice to attract notice. But as certain books have been published under the name of Miss Edgeworth, Mrs. Edgeworth, and Maria Edgeworth, some of which have not that moral tendency that alone can justify a female for appearing as an author, her father thinks it due to his daughter, and to the rest of his family, to request that the public will not consider any work under the name of Edgeworth that is not published by Messrs. Johnson and Co., St. Paul's Church-yard, London, as the production of any of his family.

"A list of Miss Edgeworth's Works may be seen at the beginning of most of her former works.

RICHARD LOVELL EDGEWORTH."

Edgeworth-town, Feb. 6, 1812.

MONTHLY RETROSPECT OF POLITICS.

GREAT BRITAIN and Ireland present many symptoms of having run through that course, which precedes the decay of states. Great trade produced great riches, and riches have produced the certain effects of prosperity, luxury and insolence. This mighty trade has been struck at by the present war. The great improvements in machinery introduced into use within the last 30 years, especially in Great Britain, for a time retarded the progress to decline. Speculation turning trade into a gambling adventure, for a short period supplied a stimulus, but like all other powerful stimulants, left behind greater debility, when its temporary power was exhausted. The disposition to continue an indulgence in luxury remains, while the means to afford the gratification are much lessened. Luxury has turned public spirit into apathy and an unbounded selfishness, and PRINCIPLE previously enervated by our corrupt state of manners, is now left to struggle with strong inducements to a
